

Summary description of the boxes on your individual experiment platform

- The green percentage bar shows how much there is left for you to complete in the present study.
- The Next task available box on the left shows the availability of the next session. If the next session is available to you, a green box labeled Start next round will appear below the boxes. By clicking on that box, you will start your next session. Please note that Soile is programmed so that you won't be able to access your next session until 24 hours have elapsed since completed the previous session.
- The blue Progress box in middle depicts the progress of the present study.
- The Deadline box on the right side does not work in the desired way, so you don't need to pay attention on it.
